Countries Line Up To Assail Peiping Regime for Jailing US Airmen as Spies

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (A) An overwhelming vote of condemnation against Red China appeared assured today as country after country joined in assailing the Peiping regime for jailing 11 American airmen as spies.

Cuba led off the debate this morning with a vigorous support of the Allied resolution. The Union of South Africa, one of the sponsors of the condemnation, followed with an appeal for general support. Czechoslovakia, as expected, fol-

Sunday School Lesson Notes

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D.D. What the Bible says about character is not found in one place but is all through the great Book, from Genesis to Revelation. After its supreme theme, and the greatest of all—the message concerning the character of God, and the glorious Gospel of His grace—it is the Bible's greatest theme of man's relationship to God and to his fellow man.

Nor are these greatest themes of the Bible in any sense separated or unrelated. Jesus said to His disciples: "Be ye perfect, even as your Father in heaven is perfect." It is in being godly, like God, that man attains his highest and best.

This close linking of man and his God is the distinctive quality Dr. Wilson Will Speak of Judaism and Christianity. Why should Peiping, after tooting the coexistence horn at Moscow's elbow, commit an act making coexistence less likely?.

There are probably several answers, but an important one lies in the Chinese political character and habit of thought.

But the papers may not tell the full story of the prisoner with a sore hand, of his plea for a writ of habeas corpus, and of the judge who set him free but didn't say anything about when or whether he should return.

It's as complicated a legal wrangle as Utah has seen in many a year. And it all started last January when Dist. Judge Joseph G. Jeppson began hearing Chapman's plea for freedom from his to 20-year burglary term. Chapman's attorneys argue

Merry-Go-Round Ike Will Beat Democrats With Security Risk Investigations

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON-White House advisers aren't publishing it, but they have been busy on a new security program which will head off the Democratic probe of the so-called "numbers game."

This is the game in which Vice President Nixon, Attorney General Brownell, and other GOP campaign speakers have claimed Republicans cleaned out Democratic security risks which menaced the government.

The Democrats deny this. And to prove their case, Sen. Olin Johnston of South Carolina, chairman-to-be of the Civil Service Committee, plans a sweeping probe of Republican firings. He believes he con prove that one-half the security risks were hired by Republicans.

To head off this probe, Eisenhower has referred the whole problem to the National Security Council which has already prepared top secret report No. 5437/1 which will not be made public for some time. However, it can be revealed that the report recommends giving a far better break to security risks, plus a standardized procedure for all government agencies, instead of the hit-and-miss divergent systems of firing personnel.

White House advisers are even considering a plan to help the accused pay the cost of defending himself, or else making the cost of defense cheaper. In the past, men like Val Orwin, one of the State Department officials charged by McCarthy with being a Communist, had to raise money from friends to carry on his fight. Though indicted, the Justice Department finally went into court after four long years and asked that the indictment be dismissed on the ground that Similarly, Abraham Chasanow, the Navy it had no case. clerk suspended for one year as a security risk with no charge placed against him, finally was given an official apology by the Assistant Secretary of the Navy and restored to his job. Chasanow had no funds, but his attorney, Joe Fanelli, defended him as a public service.

White House advisers also propose separating bona fide security risks from heavy drinkers, loose talkers, and misfits, hitherto all linked with loyalty cases as security risks.

Senator McCarthy's Attack on Ike Senator McCarthy's vigorous blast against Eisenhower this week scored fulfillment of another Pearson prediction. As early as Jan. 3, 1953, just before Eisenhower was inaugurated, Pearson wrote in his column: "McCarthy will cooperate with Ike for about a year and then turn on him just as vitriolically as he fought the State Department under Acheson."

It was in November, 1953, not quite one year later, that McCarthy delivered his first radio attack on the Eisenhower administration.

Again last month-Nov. 14-Pearson wrote: "McCarthy's secret strategy . . . was to launch an attack on Eisenhower personally and try to take over the Republican party."

Just three weeks later — Dec. 7 — McCarthy unleased his vehement blast against Eisenhower.

Name, Please?

After the recent Inter-American economic conference in Rio de Janeiro, Treasury Secretary George Humphrey said goodby to President Cafe. Through Humphrey's Brazilian interpreter, they had a pleasant chat.

On leaving the executive mansion, however, the secretary found himself surrounded by Portuguese and Spanish-speaking reporters who laid down a barrage of questions El Secretario Americano couldn't understand.

Helplessly, he turned to his interpreter. There followed a prolonged and excited conversation, during which Humphrey began to wonder what kind of embarrassing question he was going to be asked about the U.S. national debt,. the price or coffee, or what President Cafe had said to him. He heaved a great sigh of relief when the interpreter finally turned to him and demanded: "The journalists would like to know what is the secretary's first name."

Old Jokes

There were some ancient whiskers on a story told in this column recently about Aneurin Bevan and the late Ernest Bevin of the British Labour Party. According to this story, relayed from London, when an associate argued that 'Ni Bevan was really his own worst enemy, Ernie Bevin had commented tartly: "Not while I'm Old timers in Washington recall that this alive." same story was told in the early days of the New Deal.

The late Senator "Cotton Ed" Smith of South Carolina was supposed to have made the crack about President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Anyone having still earlier versions of this same Joe Miller is invited to contribute. It will probably develop that the crack was first uttered about Julius Caesar, by Brutus.

More Squeeze

U.S. dairy farmers are now squeezing more milk out of fewer cows. Back in 1937, it took 23 million cows to give 102 billion pounds of milk. Today's cows give 124 billion pounds, though their numbers have been cut by over 800,000 in the last 17 years. A gallon of milk weighs 8.6 pounds. The increased production per cow is due to articifial breeding, better feeding techniques, new medicines, and the culling of low producers from dairy herds. The average U.S. cow now gives 5,447 pounds or just under 620 gallons a year. California cows have high average production of 7,660 pounds, Louisiana low of 2,500.

Last Lap

Youthful Assistant Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Roswell B. Perkins offers this formula for becoming a successful leader and government administrator:

"It is my firm conviction," he told a meeting of students in New York recently, "that the greatest single key to success is to look on every problem that comes to your desk not only from the position where you sit-but also from the position of the last man in whose lap the problem will fall."

Bleaching, Shaving Help Conceal Dark Hair on Lip By Edwin P. Jordan, M.D.

The problem of excessive hairiness is not confined to grown women. Mrs. M., for example, writes that her daughter who is not yet 11 years old has a dark heavy growth of hair on her upper lip and asks whether bleaching would be advisable. In the vast majority of cases excessive hairiness of this sort on the face or possibly the arms or legs presents more of a psychological or emotional problem than it does a physical one; it is said that only in one case in a hundred is some disorder of the endocrine glands (glands of internal secretion) at fault.

Bleaching is one method of approaching the problem. Needless to say it does not give a perfect answer. Another method is to rub off the hairs with a cosmetic device which is well known. Shaving is a further possibility. The only safe permanent method is by use of an electric needle known as electrolysis. In an 11-year-old girl, however, it would usually seem wise not to pay too much attention to the situation or build up a serious self-consciousness.

Another problem which has troubled uncounted numbers of parents is the question of thumb-sucking. One mother wrote that her five-month-old baby sucks her thumb and asks if it would hurt the child emotionally if she tried to break her of the habit at that age. This is a difficult question to answer since there are two schools of thought in the matter.

Some believe that a definite effort should be made to break the thumb-sucking habit early in order to avoid possible trouble with the teeth. Others feel that this is unimportant. I am inclined to feel personally that too much effort should not be devoted to breaking up the habit at the age of five months. The child at all times should be given love and affection, and, as soon as possible, other interests and in all probability the little one will stop her habit before it has done any harm.

A correspondent who signs herself "worried mother" wants to know if her son's feet should be operated on because while only 5 years old he walks pigeon-toe. By this I presume the mother means that the youngster turns the toes inward on walking. This is not considered a disease by itself but is often found associated with other conditions of the foot.

It would be wise to have the youngster examined for such foot difficulties but pigeon-toe of itself is likely to be corrected without treatment as the child grows older unless some other deformity is present. Sometimes raising the outer border of the soles of the shoes may improve the gait.

No Jurisdiction

Federal Communications Commission Chairman George C. McConnaughey gets a lot of letters from irate radio listeners and TV viewers about programs they don't like.

Recently a distraught mother wrote to the FCC to complain that a certain program was harmful to her youngster. The mother asked what she could do about it. Though it has no legal power to pass judgment on or censor individual programs, the FCC did send this mother a polite little reply, making several suggestions. Among them was a hint that turning off the program might help.

But a few weeks later, the mother was back with another letter of complaint. She reported that resetting the tuning knob had worked as far as her offspring was concerned. But now the boy's grandmother was objecting because she had been deprived of her favorite program.

"This time," says Chairman McConnaughey, "the commission had to advise her that it has no jurisdiction over grandmothers."

Never Mind

The American exhibit at this fall's Salonika, Greece, International Trade Fair got the Russians in attendance all excited. The reason was that the American outdoor theater introduced CinemaScope to the Greek people—and the Russians. American documentary films and several feature-length movies lent by 20h Century-Fox were shown to overflow audiences three times nightly by the U.S. Information Agency.

One of the Soviet embassy representatives asked the Greek projectionist confidentially "whether it would be possible for the Russians to use the theater to show some of the pictures."

The Greek operator smiled and said he didn't know, but he'd ask the American director of thme pavilion. To this the Russian replied, "No, no, never mind."

No Escape

Selective service officials report that many of the 162,000 college students excused from the draft are trying hard to keep their present deferred status. They figure-incorrectly-that when the draft law expires on June 30, 1955, they may have a chance to escape all military service. Congress was one step ahead of the college Joes, however, in closing this draftevading escape route in 1951 amendments to the 1948 law.

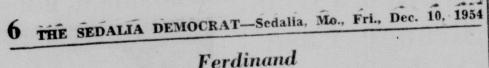

All that expires next June 30 is that portion of the law granting the Selective Service System authority to induct men under 26 years of age who have not had their deferment extended. All other portions of the law remain in effect. Draft boards can go right on inducting men who have been deferred, up to age 35.

Balloon War

Hungarian military authorities at Ferihgey Airfield, near Budapest, recently ordered up a fighter plane early one morning. It was to intercept what had been perceived as one of the Free Europe Committee's "Operation Focus" balloons. Thousands of these balloons are now spilling millions of anti-Communist leaflets into Communist Hungary.

The Hungarian pilot located the balloon and closed courageously on it. Then the discovery was made this particular balloon was one that had been sent up by the Hungarian Meteorological Institute. A refugee who recently escaped from behind the Iron Curtain related the incident to Free Europe Committee officials.
